Alcance

"Alcance is a group formed by Latino students who try to help youth reach their academic dreams"

We came together to look for ways to help students that want to learn more about the possibility of going to college. We know what its like being a Latino student looking for opportunities in order to succeed in life. For some of us it has been difficult to find motivation, for others it has been difficult to find the necessary information on the application process, and for some it has been almost impossible to achieve our goals due to a lack of financial aid. We hope that by sharing our experiences, others can overcome obstacles they may face in their pursuit of higher education.

Who we are:

- We are an independent self-made organization. We don't represent any specific institution .Our members attend: UW-Madison, UW-Milwaukee, Edgewood College, MATC and UW-Whitewater.
- We are all Latino but coming from different back-grounds, we all have an unique story to tell.
- We have all faced and continue to face different obstacles in our pursuit of higher education. We help others as well as each other overcome these obstacles.

What we do:

- We give presentations at schools to motivate and provide information to students and parents about going to college.
- We provide support to students so they can reach their academic goals.
- We support causes that promote higher education among Latino youth.

We offer:
